Flying Cai

By Hiya Swanhuysen

You know what makes dancers fun to watch? Brutal rigor. That's pretty much it. An artist's eye for the audience point of view helps too, and at the Lily Cai Chinese Dance Company Home Season Concert, that's what you get. Artistic director Cai is known for the gorgeousness of her sets, costumes, and devices — plus the brutal rigor of her dancers. You know what makes dancers fun to listen to? Stone genius composers. The Cai company revels in the music direction of stone genius Gang Situ — together, Cai, Situ, and those mighty dancers have won many, many awards. Tonight the group presents two premieres, plus a remount of its superpopular "Candelas," a piece in which the dancers carry lighted candles. (Full disclosure: SF Weekly's bookkeeper and office coordinator Alexandra Nguy is the most recent addition to the Lily Cai Company. Break a leg, Alex! Woo! Yay!)
